Adam works closely with business owners and their key employees as they maneuver through business transitions. He has assisted clients at every stage of their business life cycle, including corporate formation, compliance, raising capital, and structuring ownership transitions. Adam takes pride in structuring transactions that clients understand and imposing order on chaos.

Prior to joining Tonkon Torp, Adam worked at Karnopp Petersen in Bend, Oregon, where he gained significant business transaction experience and also represented employers and employees in employment-related disputes. He also served as a judicial law clerk to the Honorable Rex Armstrong and the Honorable James Egan of the Oregon Court of Appeals.

Adam is an outdoor enthusiast who spends his free time with his wife and daughters exploring the wonders of the Pacific Northwest. Adam enjoys starting the day with coffee from one of Portland's great roasters and ending the day with a beer from one of its great breweries.
