Megan is an associate in the firm's Litigation Department. Megan represents and advises businesses in employment disputes. She represents individuals, companies, and government entities in state and federal appellate courts. Megan also assists clients on trust and fiduciary disputes. Prior to joining Tonkon Torp, she served as a judicial law clerk for the Honorable Erika Hadlock, former Chief Judge of the Oregon Court of Appeals. Megan worked on a variety of civil, administrative, and criminal appeals, including complex business and contract law cases, worker's compensation matters, and free speech issues.

Megan graduated summa cum laude from Lewis & Clark Law School in 2015, where she was Notes & Comments Editor for the Lewis & Clark Law Review and recipient of the Paul Anthony Casey Public Interest and Candise DuBoff-Jones Memorial Scholarships.

While a law student, Megan worked as a summer associate at Haglund Kelley LLP and served as a judicial extern for Judge Ann Aiken at the U.S. District Court for the District of Oregon.

Prior to law school, Megan worked for several years as a service coordinator for the Regional Center of Orange County, where she managed a caseload of 120 individuals with developmental disabilities. As an undergraduate, Megan spent time in Klaipeda, Lithuania, studying social and humanitarian issues.

In her free time, Megan serves as a mentor to first year Lewis & Clark Law School students and as a member of the board of directors for Youth, Rights & Justice. Outside of work, Megan's interests include tennis, running, exploring Oregon's wineries, reading fiction, and spending time with her husband and dogs.
